Baltimore has a humid subtropical climate with hot summers and mild winters. The city has a diverse population, with a mix of long-time residents, young professionals and students. Housing prices vary widely, with affordable row homes in some areas and high-end properties in neighborhoods like Federal Hill and Harbor East. Still, Baltimore stands out as a more affordable option among major metropolitan areas.

Whether you're craving Maryland crab or international cuisine, Baltimore offers a wide range of dining options. For local seafood, try L.P. Steamers or Captain James Landing. If you're looking for an upscale dining experience, Azumi is a sophisticated Japanese grill located inside the Four Seasons Hotel. For a quick meal, be sure to visit well-known food halls such as the Broadway Market or the Lexington Market, which is the oldest continuously running market in America.

Stroll along the scenic Inner Harbor, where you can enjoy waterfront views, visit historic ships or take a boat tour. For a taste of local history, wander through Fell's Point, a historic neighborhood known for its 18th-century buildings, vibrant pubs and a scenic waterfront. If you're looking to enjoy nature, Patterson Park is a great place for picnics and walking, while also offering stunning views from its historic pagoda.

Baltimore is home to the NFL's Baltimore Ravens and the MLB's Baltimore Orioles. Whether you're a die-hard sports fan or want to simply join in the fun, don't miss the Orioles Opening Day at Camden Yards and take part in this unofficial local holiday. To get a glimpse of horse racing, be sure to watch the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Racecourse, the second oldest racetrack in the nation.
